Meyner and Landis LLP's immigration group provides service of only the highest quality at a reasonable cost. Its attorneys and paralegals are not only extremely experienced and highly motivated, but also highly responsive to clients' needs. Attorneys are directly involved in all cases, with phone calls and emails receiving a prompt response.

The nature of immigration and naturalization law demands personal contacts, strong liaisons and individual-centered representation. Credibility and reputation are key ingredients for success at an administrative level. The firm believes that its expertise, reputation and solid clientele are the foundation for the ongoing success of the immigration practice of the law firm.

Our firm will provide advice as to most feasible and/or practical non-immigration classification that should be pursued for a particular individual; and assist in formulating a plan of employment (short or long term) so as to accommodate the needs of the employer and/or the employee, as the case may be.

Our immigration lawyers in New Jersey handle National Interest Waiver cases, representing foreign nationals whose work is potentially in the national interest of the U.S. We secure visas for outstanding researchers and foreign nationals with extraordinary abilities, such as artists, professional athletes, and entertainers. We also secure visas for domestic workers, such as nannies, and family immigration visas for fiances of American citizens as well as family members of citizens or permanent residents. We also assist in naturalization applications for permanent residents.
